To whom it may concern

On Saturday July 6th I attended a half day course provided by Alpha Fire Training. The training was given by Mr Philip Hall. As Health and Safety Officer for the College, I attended the course to evaluate the content and delivery with a view to further courses for the College staff. The following observations are made regarding the course, it's preparation and follow up

Course Preparation- Mr Hall liased with the College prior to the course in order to establish our needs. The resultant course was, therefore, customised to our particular requirements. In addition, he visited the premises where the course was to be held to assess it's suitability. Pre-course materials were provided and copies of the pack that would be issued to students. Mr Hall arrived 45 minutes before the course commencement time in order to set up his equipment and ensure that everything was as agreed.

Course Delivery- Mr Hall began by putting the students at their ease and explaining what was to be done and the learning outcomes. His manner was both friendly and open. The pace of delivery was suitable for the students attending and the visual aids adequate for the purpose. There was an excellent selection of old and new fire extinguishers for demonstration purposes all supported by good quality videos. The mix of teaching materials enabled him to present a lively and entertaining training
